Candidate Statement:

From the state to the city, overpaid government officials keep mismanaging money, repeatedly overspending city budgets, paying millions where we have no obligation, while ignoring potholes. Visit www.goharry.biz and learn more about me and how I want to make Sacramento an even better place to live.

Policing is a core duty. We didn't heed grand jury warnings of coming officer shortages. Demoralized officers fled to more supportive cities, leaving us with as few as 600 overworked officers. That's why my plan calls for a massive recruitment of Level-II reserve officers.

I'm against the property transfer tax increase and the vacant lot tax. I want consultant payments, and other settlements visible online. Plus, we must make sure the city never hides the number of rapes from the Sacramento Bee again. I want to move the agency that investigates the police (OPSA) from under the political influence of the city council and placed under oversight of a more independent police commission.

Empty store parking lots should be homeless resting areas so we can enforce laws against tents in our parks. Inside, we'll have cubicles for people committed to "getting their act together."

I hope you'll join me.
